

3146 Sports Arena Boulevard, #21 ■ San Diego, CA 92110
(619) 221-0100 ■ (619) 221-0025 fax
www.ultrazonesandiego.com

TEAM-BUILDING AT ULTRAZONE

Since 1995, the ULTRAZONE team-building and special events program has developed a significant and loyal following. Our unique approach to team-building is well known throughout the San Diego business community, as well as by corporations visiting the area for conventions.

Playing laser tag with members of your organization at ULTRAZONE incorporates the basic principles of team work and game strategy, allowing employees to enhance communication, develop rapport and camaraderie, sharpen their competitive edge and/ or define leadership skills while having a great time. We feature two Team-Building programs with varying degrees of structure in order to meet your diverse needs.

JOIN IN THE FUN An Informal Team-Building Program

ULTRAZONE is a natural team-building experience. Game play will intrinsically offer an opportunity for “team” interaction and development. Camaraderie, communication, and the simple enjoyment of positive group interaction are an expected consequence of ULTRAZONE game play.

In many instances, a company or organization needs a unique setting for a day away from the office where large numbers of employees can experience a shared group entertainment event. Perhaps the goal is to recover from burnout, stress, or end-of-project exhaustion; or it’s time to take an opportunity celebrate accomplishments! The interaction, level of activity, and participation in each game allows individuals to take a break from the real world, laugh beyond description, and enjoy each other’s company. Our follow-up evaluations indicate that participation in such a unique and thrilling adventure will most certainly enhance the prospects of staff harmony upon your return to work.

This more informal program typically involves three games of ULTRAZONE, with the goal being camaraderie, fun, and the development of general team skills and communication.

Players receive a game briefing where they are offered basic instruction for game play without prior team organization or active teamwork facilitation. The goal is to acquaint players with the arena, use of the equipment, three-team play, and the thrill of the Ultimate Laser Adventure. At the end of the game scores are posted on huge monitors and each player receives an individualized, comprehensive scorecard detailing their and the team’s performance. This feedback will enable players to analyze individual and team performance, and facilitate the development of next game strategy.

ULTRAZONE staff offers game feedback and is always available for team discussion throughout the event. We pride ourselves in creative use of this popular program. We have developed many specialized variations of “Join In The Fun,” depending upon the focus and needs of the particular group.

T-BLAST Team-Building Laser Adventure & Staff Training

As we developed our team-building services to meet the organizational development needs of our special event clients, a new program evolved designed specifically for those corporations and professional associations that require a formal, structured experience: Team-Building Laser Adventure & Staff Training – T-BLAST.

While incorporating all of the elements of the traditional “Join in the Fun” program, the T-BLAST program takes the next step in structured team-building interaction and event design. A specific format is followed from pre-event planning through the event and with post-event follow-up. Each T-BLAST is designed to meet the team-building and staff development needs of your specific group.

After the initial contact we begin to detail the current “team” situation for your group, your desired outcomes for the program, and the necessary pre-event planning required for the creation of your program. A visit to our website www.ultrazonesandiego.com and/or an actual site visit by your planning committee follows where you can begin to visualize your event. With your group more clearly defined and your objectives outlined, ULTRAZONE builds your program; all you will have to do is arrive for the day of the event.

The actual T-BLAST program demonstrates the development of teamwork and group development through a three-phase process:

Get In The ZONE – participants experience their first ZONE adventure. Players receive a game briefing where they offered basic instruction for game play without prior team organization or active teamwork facilitation. The goal is to acquaint players with the arena, use of the equipment, three-team play, and the thrill of the Ultimate Laser Adventure. Each player then receives an ULTRAZONE personalized membership “smart button” for use during the event, allowing the equipment to recognize the player by his or her actual name. At the end of the game scores are posted on huge monitors and each player receives an individualized, comprehensive scorecard detailing their and the team’s performance.

Team Building Instruction – prior to the second ZONE adventure, participants receive detailed coaching instruction and guidance on Team-Building from the ULTRAZONE staff. Then, using the detailed game analysis information from their scorecards, teams through facilitated interaction decide, as a group, on the implementation of their plans. Strategies are developed, leadership roles are defined, and strengths and weakness of the team are analyzed. A team is born! Game #2 is then played.

Group Discussion & Strategic Planning – prior to the third ZONE adventure, participants evaluate all aspects of the previous game, and are now able to analyze the success (or lack of) their prior strategies and the overall functioning of the team. They then discuss new tactics and how to better function as a unit. ULTRAZONE staff remains available to answer general game questions, but no coaching is provided as teams now fully plan their strategic ideas together as an evolving squad. Team communication and cooperation are highlighted. An event evaluation follows this last session.

Discover more about us on the web at www.ultrazonesandiego.com. Please call us at 619-221-0100 for more information about Team-Building at ULTRAZONE, as well as to arrange a tour and complimentary play.